AlligatorZone®
where kids meet cool startups

Pictured above: Andrew Sutherland, Founder and CTO, Quizlet, presents their software which allows anyone to create sets of flashcards, games and learning tools and share them with friends, classmates and students for learning together, at AlligatorZone in Fremont, CA on February 4, 2019.

Since June 2014, at AlligatorZone's events, founders of over 160 startups have showcased their work to school-age kids in 20 cities from Mountain View, CA to Miami, FL. Run in collaboration with public library systems, school districts and non-profit organizations, AlligatorZone's events offer a rare shared-experience between a parent and a child in inspiring settings, helping learners stay curious and understand the future for which we all must prepare, while the entrepreneurs get to interact with the next generation of consumers and creators in a supportive and encouraging community setting. WHY ATTEND ALLIGATORZONE

- Kids learn how entrepreneurs approach specific problems in industries.
- Kids get inspired through honest conversations with startup founders.
- Kids have a uniquely uplifting shared-experience with parents.
- At home the kitchen table conversations become lofty.
- Kids realize they too can do something cool. When Jake Heller of Casetext said he went to the nearby high school right in Sunnyvale, that resonated.
- Startup founders at AlligatorZone are often kind and generous role models.
- Kids at AlligatorZone develop poise and confidence to talk to founders/CEOs.
- Kids learn about resilience when entrepreneurs talk of their own setbacks.
- Kids at AlligatorZone may have some great stories to tell in college essays.
- AlligatorZone kids get a peek into the future that's usually reserved for VCs.
- AlligatorZone may even inspire you to find your raison d'être early on.
- AlligatorZone kids become standouts wherever they go, and they go places.
